

Improving academic outcomes for emergent bilingual students with Rosetta Stone® English

As the number of emergent bilingual students, or English language learners, continues to increase in your schools, you need smarter ways to ensure better academic outcomes for every learner. This means providing both your teachers and emergent bilingual students with the tools they need for success.

Rosetta Stone English can help. An adaptive blended learning program for grades K–6, it supports students' English language development through academic conversations.

- Integrates three key areas: speaking, listening, and grammar
- Provides personalized speaking instruction, practice, and feedback
- Promotes academic conversations in subjects such as math, science, social studies, general knowledge, and biographies
- Offers continuous progress monitoring to track student and teacher success and ongoing needs
- Incorporates cultural responsiveness to honor learners' diversity

Advance educational equity while improving student, teacher, and district outcomes with Rosetta Stone English. Learn more at rosettastone.com/k12.

The program can help you:

- Provide educational opportunity and close long-standing accessibility and equity gaps
- Improve performance on state assessments and increase graduation rates
- Enhance teacher effectiveness and boost satisfaction
- Access and monitor performance at all levels
- Prompt opportunities for biliteracy or multiliteracy skills for all students
- Prove accountability and success in order to enhance funding
